

During the construction of the railway bridge over the Tsavo River in 1898 by the British for what was known as the Uganda Railway, approximately 140 were killed by two mane-less male lions, over a period of 3 months. The Original site where these events took place is where today's Man Eater's is located.

An exclusive Lodge comprising of 30 fully furnished en-suite spacious luxurious tents nestled on the banks of the Tsavo River accompanied with the view of the wilderness Tsavo West National Park has to offer. www.crocodileracers.com
